The memorandum of understanding drafted and initialled by Israeli and Palestinian security experts, in association with Central Intelligence Agency repre-sentatives, will have to be revised, a source in the prime minister's bureau said yesterday.

Prime Minister Binyamin Netanyahu has deemed the memorandum unacceptable and will not Netanyahu was quoted by the lum news agency as having said the work on the scourity memorandum has not been completed. b cause it has not yet been referred to the chief of staff, the judiciary, and the defense establishment for approval.

But the worst scene is the garbage dump on the outskirts of Kiryat Arba, used by both Jews and Palestinians. Dozens of Arab children can be seen there, going through the garbage, looking for a piece of bread, a sliver of cheese, or a yoghurt thrown out by a Jewish child. It's happening half an hour from Jerusalem and only two minutes from Arafat's planned palace. A different world.

Now, in Hebron, there isn't that much tension between Fatah and Hamas, as there is elsewhere. In fact, the city's extended Arab families - who are affiliated all over the political map, from Islamic Jihad to those who collaborated with the GSS - have succeeded in maintaining fraternal peace and avoiding bloodshed.

But in their relations with Jews, it's a different story. Trying to educate toward peace under these conditions is a dream. The poverty only increases the frustration. And the frustranon increases Hamas's appeal.

This year, the holidays of the three religions coincide. Today is Christmas and the second day of Hanukka; next week, even before the Year arrives, New Ramadan begins. But forget about peace on Earth, and goodwill towards men. This confluence only increases the friction.

Bethlehem has merrier Christmas

By HAIN SHAPIRO and news agencies

Festive colored lights and banners replaced Palestinian flags and giant pictures of Palestinian leader Yasser Arafat in Bethlehem, as the town of Jesus's birth marked Christmas for the third time under Palestinian rule.

The change in tone apparently came in response to complaints from Christians that for the past two years, Christmas had been more of a national Palestinian event than a religious holiday. Earlier in the day, the traditional procession by

Latin Patriarch Michel Sabbah from the Patriarchate in Jerusalem to the Church of the Nativity in Bethlehem was delayed for about an hour, because Israeli police had found a suspicious object at Rachel's Tomb at the entrance to the town. The site, which marks the border of the Palestinian Authority, was later the point at which the Israeli guards accompanying the cleric were replaced by Palestinian policemen. The patriarch was met there hy the mayors of Bethlehem, Beit Sahur, and Beit Jalla, who accompanied him into the town.

Netanyahu, Yisrael Ba'aliya reach temporary budget compromise

Yisrael Ba'aliya will not - for the time being - vote against the government on the 1998 state budget, following a meeting yesterday between the party's MKs and Prime Minister Binyamin Netanyahu. The party is demanding funding for several social issues in return. Without the party's support the government does not have a majority in the Knesset.

The two sides agreed that a committee would meet to discuss the party's demands. If agreement is not reached by Monday, however, Yisrael Ba'aliya will not vote with the government.

The committee comprises the directors-general of the Prime Minister's Office and Treasury, along with representatives of the National Infrastructure Ministry and Yisrael Ba'aliya.

The party's key demands are: a rental aid update for single-parent families and older people: a general increase in state mortgages; and a special university program for immigrants.

The main bone of contention for the party is that state mortgages have not been updated for five years, during which time their value has been eroded by some 50 percent. While the Treasury has offered to reduce that gap next year hy 12.5%, or an estimated NIS 600 million, Yisrael Ba'aliya head Natan Sharansky is demanding considerably more.

Despite this development and other coalition demands, principally from the Gesher Party, Netanyahu was confident yesterday that the budget will be passed.

There's no need to get so excited," Netanyahu said. "In previous Knessel years the government has lost more than 50 votes but still succeeded in passing the budget." The Treasury yesterday denied reports that it has to find a NIS 1 billion cut to meet its budget deficit target of 2.4% of the gross domestic product.

Hospitals strike to protest changes in health system

By JUDY SIEGEL

The public hospitals are to begin an open-ended strike and operate on a reduced Shabbat schedule from 7 a.m. today to protest against the planned changes in the National Health Insurance system.

In addition, the community health fund clinics will handle only emergencies until 10 a.m. today and then return to a normal schedule. In the hospitals, only vital departments such as neonatal, dialysis, and obstetrics will function normally. Meanwhile, in a last-ditch from making major changes in the National Health Insurance law, directors of all the country's public hospitals and senior health system administrators will this morning demonstrate in a "protest encampment" outside the Knesset. Health Minister Yehoshua Matza plans to attend the protest as well. The proposed changes, approved by the Knesset Finance Committee as part of the Treasurysponsored arrangements bill. would allow each health fund to set its own basket of services. transfer responsibility for the tipat halav family bealth centers to health funds, allow insurers to charge extra for a wide variety of services and eliminate long-term geriatric nursing care from health fund responsibility.

Kupat Holim Clalit director-general Dr. Yitzhak Peterburg yesterday expressed concern for the continued existence of the public health system following the finance committee's approval of the proposed changes, which will come into effect if approved by the plenum.

These will bring about the establishment of two separate health systems - one for the well-off and another for lower socioeconomic groups, he said.

The average family will have to pay over NIS 1,000 extra annually for visits to doctors, hospital emergency rooms, outpatient clinics and other services, said Peterburg, who called for the separation of the health chapter of the arrangements bill from the rest of its regulations.

Health Policy Research Program at Jerusalem's Brookdale Institute, said yesterday that although the finance committee stated the elderly, poor and chronically ill would be exempt from the extra health fund fees, no government subsidy has been offered to induce the insurers to keep such members, who are expensive to treat. Without this, said Rosen, the insurers will do all they can to get such groups to leave; one of the great benefits of the National Health Insurance Law was that it provided incentives to the insurers to attract the poor, elderly and chronically ill, for whom they get an enlarged share of health taxes. Previously, Rosen said, lowerincome people paid health funds minimal dues, and the insurers didn't want them, but Brookdale studies have shown the three-year-old insurance law actually sought to reach out to these "undesirables." Rosen added that changing Dr. Bruce Rosen, head of the arrangements for long-term geri-atric nursing would leave the lowincome sector without a realistic chance for such care, as they would not be able to afford private insurance for this purpose. This aspect of the proposed changes has been totally neglected unnl now, and no one has provided any answers. Rosen urged separating at least this issue from the arrangements bill so serious consideration can be invested during the coming months without doing major harm. Health Ministry director-general Gabi Barabash expressed hope that MKs will vote against the proposals in the plenum. He noted that completely transferring responsibility for preventive health services to the health funds would be disastrous.

"Today, those health funds that provide preventive care instead of government-supervised upat halav family bealth centers have only a 60% rate of full infant vaccinations, compared to over 90% in npat halav centers," Barabash said.

PM denies hiding pullback figures

Prime Minister Binyamin Netanyahu yesterday denied reports that he had told the US and Palestinians the scope of further redeployment, but that he was keeping the information from the cabinet until after the state budget bas passed. Last night Israel Radlo reported Labor MK Uzi Baram as saying Foreign Minister David Levy was the senior source who claimed that Netanyahu was withholding information from the cabinet.

"The reports that I had told US Secretary of State Madeleine Albright the percentage of the redeployment are false. I never did that," Netanyahu told reporters following a meeting of the Knesset Foreign Affairs and Defense Committee.

"It's not my personal decision," he continued, "but it is the government which has to decide oo these most important issues, including on the permanent and oo figures were given."

He said the opposition is guessing at the final figures. "so that if they come close they can say: 'We told you it was decided in advance." He said the process is complicated and still under discussion in the cahinet

"Unlike in the Oslo Agreement when the ministers and defense establishment had no idea that something was going oo, we're doing it the other way round," said Netanyahu. "These discussions will determine the country's future aod security and we must be careful and responsible. We must examine national interests and deduce the scope of the redeployment from this," he said. arrangements. No scope of redeployment morning to discuss their mutual concern about the current pace of the peace process, the prime minister's spokesman, Shai Bazak, confirmed.

Labor Party leader Ehud Barak said yesterday that Netanyahn had agreed to a 10.5 percent to 12 percent redeployment, but is delaying announcing it until next month. He also accused the prime minister of giving in to US dictates.

Likud MK Ze'ev Begin made a similar claim, saying Netanyahu had already given in "to a PLO-Hamas alliance." Netanyahu denied this and also rejected reports that he was keeping Levy in the dark. "I value his work and his contribution to the peace process," Netanyahu said. "We have worked together and am sure we will continue to work together." He denied he is considering holding early elections.

Netanyahn reportedly told the committee the government continues to stand by the the principle that progress depends on the Palestinians fulfilling their commitments.

By ELLI WOHLGELERNTER

Ateret Cohanim yeshiva students demanded upgraded security yesterday, warning in a letter to Prime Minister Binyamin Netanyahu that their safety was at risk and that the onus would fall on the government if they came under attack. Their concern has grown in the aftermath of the slaying five weeks ago of yeshiva student, Gabriel Hirschberg, and the subsequent stabbing and wounding of another student near the Damascus Gate entrance to Jerusalem's Old City. "We absolve ourselves of any responsibility for the situation that exists now including all the terrible risks involved in it," wrote yeshiva executive director Yossi Baumol. Despite promises last week that security in the Old City would be improved, only three security personnel were spotted during a one-hour tour of the Moslem Quarter yesterday afternoon. Baumol indicated there were two main differences with the authorioes over how to improve security. One was over the yeshiva's demands for gun permits for private guards.

"In our meeting a month ago," Baumol wrote Netanyahu, "you ordered us to make sure that our students move through the alleyways of the Old City under armed guard provided by the Modi'in Ezrachi company funded by the Housing Ministry .... Unfortunately, the company cannot put the guards into action for a month now because the Israeli police has not found a way to provide them with the necessary permits for their guns."

The second issue is a conflict with police over whether to add foot patrols or guard posts. Baumol would prefer adding permanent positions so that students know where to get help.

Jerusalem Police spokesman Shmuel Ben-Ruby said a decision was made against setting up a fixed position.

Walker denies Luxor charges

By JAY BUSHINSKY

The new American ambassador to Israel, Edward S. Walker, Jr., presented his credentials to President Ezer Weizman yesterday in a dignified yet festive ceremony that symbolized the highlight of the US diplomat's 30-year-long career. A military honor guard welcomed Walker as he strode along the red carpet laid out for him and the police band played the "Star Spangled Banner."

After emerging from Weizman's office, where the chief of state and the envoy engaged in a brief chai after completing the requisite for-malities. Walker expressed "delight" at being back in Israel. He began his work with the US for-eign service in Tel Aviv 30 years ago as then-ambassador Walworth Barbour's assistant.

"We have a lot of work to do." said Walker, who goes by the nick-name, Ned, "and hopefully we can be of help to the government in its efforts to bring about peace with security."

He pledged that he and his staff would make every effort to that end and said he is looking forward to "interesting days." Asked about The Jerusalem

Post's report that he told Foreign Minister David Levy that Iran was behind the terrorist attack in Luxor, Egypt, last month and that that the linkage was to the Iranian embassy in Damascus, Walker said: "No, that is not exactly what I said."

He refrained from going into fur-ther detail, saying only, "I will let that it was Walker who pinned the

New treatment for prostate cancer

By JUDY STEGEL

An implant containing a compound that suppresses the producnon of testosterone in men bas been developed by an Israeli-American team to treat metastasizing prostate cancer. It has been used in clinical studies on 34 patients, and it could take two years for it to gain approval from the US Food and Drug Administration.

The implant, which is inserted into the skin, was developed by Prof. Irving Spitz of Jerusalem's Sbaare Zedek Hospital with scientists from the Population Council in New York. Although histrelin, a synthetic form of the natural bormone LH-RH - which controls the body's production of sex hormones - has been around for some time, the delivery system via a hydrogel implant is the innovation. Implanting the 2.6 cm. long capsule under the skin on the inner part of the arm is a simple procedure (some women undergo Norplant implants under their skin to prevent pregnancy).

Until now, this type of prostate cancer has been treated by castration or quarterly injections of testosterone suppressors, which are painful and inconvenient.

Spitz, who heads the hospital's hormone research institute, conducted a study of the implant along with Dr. Amitsur Farkas, who heads the urology depart-ment, and Prof. Raphael Catane, who heads the oncology institute. The implant is also being tested at Cornell University and the University of Salzburg. Spitz said that prostate cancer is the first type of tumor proven to be connected to hormone producnon.

MKs set up caucus for Pollard

By LIAT COLLENS

Ouiet diplomacy has failed to gain convicted spy Jonathan Pollard's release, so the time has come for opeo and intensive activity instead, said MK Ophir Pines (Labor) yesterday when he inaugurated the Knesset Caucus for

Pollard. The new lobby received a sizeable mmout of ministers and MKs, including Communications Minister Limor Livnat and Immigration and Absorption Minister Yuli Edelstein, who both recently met with Pollard in jail, MKs Yona Yahav, Elie Goldschmidt (both Labor), Gideon Ezra (Likud), Knesset Law Committee Chairman Shaul Yahalom (National Religious Party), Moledet leader Rehavam Ze'evi, Avraham Herschson (Liknd) and Marina Solodkin (Yisrael Ba'aliya). Pollard's lawyer Larry Dub was also present.

Pines said the current government is the first to recognize Pollard and said he hopes US President Bill Clinton will pardon Pollard in honor of the jubilee.

Edelstein said hundreds of people had asked to help Pollard. He sug-gested the lobby ask the chief rabbis to include Pollard's name in the prayer for MIAs and PoWs, a practice Edelstein said exists in his synagogue. Ze'evi said that while most of those convicted of espionage in the US in recent years had been released after three to four years, Pollard is still in prison after 12 years. He said this is because the US intelligence community and Justice Department are putting pressure against his release, and neither the Jewish community nor the Israeli government is counteracting this.

Ezra said the matter should be raised at the World Jewish Congress.

It was concluded that the cancus would support open diplomatic activity for Pollard's release as a humanitarian gesture and act on his behalf in Aipac and the American Jewish Congress.

HEBREW PRESS REVIEW

Zionist congress

The 33rd Zionist congress opened Monday in Jerusalem and the Hebrew press pondered over its purpose and prospects of functioning in the future. "The 33rd Zionist Congress, taking place on the 50th year of the state, might also be the last," claims Ha'aretz's Lili Galili commentiog oo the scanty funds that the movement is receiving and the lack of interest that the congress is drawing. She quotes one of the delegates of the congress, Yuly Koshrovsky, saying: The Zionist congress is an abstract idea. The public doesn't understand its purpose, and even the participating delegates have a hard time uoderstanding its structure." According to Amos Carmel in Yediot Aharonot, the initial celebration of the history of almost one hundred years of Zionism, has been usurped by political interest. "What does it have to do with the real problems of the world's relations with the state of Israel and the Jewish people?," he asks, adding that the foreign delegates participating in the event are either do-gooders or people lusting for polincal involvement. The Israeli delegates, he states, representing party mechanisms, have nothing, necessarily to do with the Ziooist agenda. However, "The Zionist ageoda is holding up despite the interested parties."

In light of the growing social ruptures between Haredi and secular communities; the rich and the poor, highlighted by the unemployment rate, commentators conveyed their disappointment in the Labor party's apparent passivity regarding social problems

Haim Assa in Ma'ariv accuses opposition members of making their pursuit of positions their only aim, should Labor leader Ebud Barak win the next elections. Assa also attacks Barak for not giving the people of Ofakim bope, or providing them with any leadership, in his recent visit there. Labor should have taken this social crisis under its wings bringing into its . own court this suffering segment of the population," he writes. Yediot's Nahnm Barnea addresses the inequality between Haredim and secular Jews as far as the budgets are concerned and the services that the Haredi parties are able to provide for their community, as opposed to the secular parties characterized by "chattering, idleness and false liberalism.

He adds that "there is no one who will cry ont; no Meretz; no Labor, whoever wants social services should go to the Haredim."

Coming together in Athens

Likud coalition members and top Palestinian officials discussed their divergent positions last week during a four day convention in Athens, initiated by Israel's International Center for Peace. Ma'ariv's Shalom Yerushalmi reports on the convention, saying that although there were no far-reaching results, "both sides finally got to know one another."

He adds that "Sncb a meeting, which brings together right-wing Israelis and Palestinians in formal and informal get togethers is worth much more than any pompous convention of international experts."

Shetreet also bridges a gap

Other stands were bridged this week, this time between the Likud and Labor parties following coalition chairman Meir Shetreet's statement that he would agree to a Palestinian state if the Palestinians agree to give np Jerusalem. Ma'ariv's Yosef Lapid concludes that Shereet's position is not any different from Ehud Barak's. Now that the right-of-the-left and the left-of-the- right have converged, it seems that the process [of accepting a Palestinian state] has arrived."

Police claim Afuta killed Elimelech

By ELLI WOHLGELERNTER

NEWS

Police said yesterday that Jerusalem hairdresser David Afuta shot and killed model Anat Elimelech three weeks ago before tuming the gun on himself. The findings reversed an earlier police scenario.

Police said that shooting-trajectory analyses, and forensic and fingerprint tests confirmed that Afuta fired all three shots - one to the chest of Elimelech that killed her, one non-lethal wound to his shoulder, and then the fatal shot to his chest. "We are not 100 percent sure, but 99.9," said

Yossi Portugal, head of investigations. Police earlier surmised that Elimelech had killed Afuta with two bullets before shooting herself. But in a cryptic brieflog to reporters yesterday, police said the investigation was sull conunuing regarding some unanswered questions. Foremost among these is how the murder weapon ended up alongside Elimelech's right hand on the floor. Police said they found the two bodies lying on the floor of the apartment alongside a pullout sofa, outstreiched and parallel to each other, with Afuta's head by Elimelech's feet and his legs laying over her left arm. One theory involves Afuta's two brothers, Yossi and Shimon, who climbed into the apartment from the root, while a locksmith was working on picking the door lock. Sources said police are working on a theory that it was the brothers who put the gun next 10 Elimelech's hand. Channel 1 said the hrothers were being questioned.

Nir Elimelech, Anat's brother, said yesterday that after hearing the story from police, "We are not surprised, because we know that Anat would not shoot even a mosquito - she was too nice." Police said they would recommend to state prosecutors that the case be closed, because the murderer himself was dead. Afuta was a well known hairdresser who, until two weeks before his death, had been cutting the hair of Prime Minister Binyamin Netanyahu and his wife. Sara.

Elimelech was a 10p model and the star of the Hyper-Kol supermarket chain ads. She had also made two children's videos and was to perform in the Fesogal children's show this week.

Druse first non-Jew on general staff

By ARIEH O'SULLIVAN

A Druse general has been recommended to take over as the government's deputy coordinator of activities in the territories, defense sources confirmed yesterday. When appointed, Brig.-Gen. Yusef Mishlav will be the first non-lewish officer to serve in a senior general staff position in the IDF. There have been at least two other Druse generals, but they did not serve on the general staff.

Coordinator of government activities in the territories Maj.-Gen. Ya'akov "Mandy" Or recommended Mishalv, 45, as his deputy a few months ago.

Chief of General Staff Lt-Gen. Annon Lipkin Shahak recently approved the promotion in consultations with Defense Minister Yitzhak Mordechai. Defense sources said Mishlav's appointment is to be

As deputy, Mishlav is to be responsible for the border crossings between Israel and the Palestinian Authority, and much of his work will revolve around the renovations being done at Karni Crossing. He is also to work with the Jordanians and act as a liaison to international organizations.

Mishlav is currently the chief staff officer of the Southern Command. In the past he commanded a reserve division in the south. There is currently only an acting deputy coordinator for the territories, since Brig .-Gen. Baruch Spiegel stepped down four months ago. Mishalv is from the village of Abu Sna'an and a 27-year, decorated career officer, He has served in the past as deputy commander of IDF forces in Judea and Samaria and deputy commander of IDF forces in Lebanon. He is a graduate of the IDF's National Defense College and has an MA

The Palestinian Authority is calling its national census an overwhelming success, with a 99.9 percent response rate, despite its claim of some 100 cases of Israeli harassmeot against census-takers. ### At the World Zionist Congress 'Unity, unity' but there is no unity

By ARYEH DEAN COHEN

It was a ringing cry for unity that Labor Party leader Ehud Barak issued at yesterday's session of the Zionist Congress but there was precious little of it in evidence in the hall.

Differences over the future of the settlements in Judea and Samaria and over the standing of the Conservative and Reform movements in Israel led to jarring confrontations, with Meretz MK Yossi Sarid almost being shouted off the podium.

"We must bind the rifts that exist between us," Barak said in his call for unity in Israel and the Jewish world. "The history of the Jewish people has documented the terri-ble price of a struggle between brothers and of baseless hatred."

An hour earlier. Sarid had touched off a storm when he said "anybody who is engaged now in enlarging the settlements is com-mitting an anti-Zionist act." Members of right-wing factions began shouting "You are not a Jew!" and "Go Home!".

As the day wore on, there appeared to be very different opinions among the participants in the Congress about just what constinites unity, and whether it's even good for the Jews.

lesson to be learned from history is that the Jewish people must guard itself against internal divistons.

"The Jewish people are built like a mosaic," he said. "but we have the potential to break apart from within."

Barak said the Labor Party would vote against the conversion bill if it involved "arm-twisting" instead of compromise. "We will not allow a third of the Jewish people to be ripped out from inside us," he said.

Noting that there were representatives from various political orgatizations and religious streams at the Congress, Barak said: "Please don't let this [conversion bill] issue turn into a political issue." Yeshiva University president Rabbi Prof. Norman Lamm said that the Reform and Conservative movements had been given too much weight in the Zionist movement. He warned that this might cause a rift at a time when the movement needed unity. But actor and singer Theodore Bikel, representing American friends of Meretz, asked whether the talk about unity did not miss the point. "No doubt unity is something to be desired, to be striven for," he said. "But it cannot Barak told the delegates that the be willed into being by mere declaration. For unity to come about, there must be respect for different viewpoints, different modes of liv-

As a human being, as a Jew, and as a lifelong Zionist, I deplore disharmony and its manifestations. Yes, respect is a two-way street, and we will return respect for respect, tolerance for tolerance, acceptance for acceptance. "We are either partners or we are not. If indeed we are, then it must be a partnership between fully recognized Jews in fact as well as in law." While Congress participants geared up for voting on resolutions and on the remaining members of the Zionist Executive, slated for today's final day of discussions, the issue of unity, or the seeming lack of it, weighed heavily on many delegates' minds.

While Barak recalled the miracle Zionism performed in creating a state out of the ashes of the Holocaust, Hadassah President Marlene Post warned that -if this Congress comes out with a statement that says: 'We're all different; 1 don't respect you, you don't respect me,' then we have shot ourselves in the foot and we have destroyed the World Zionist movement."

Masorti immigrants arrive from Argentina

By ARYEH DEAN COHEN

Thirteen Argentinean Jewish families arrive here this morning as part of a new plan for bringing immigrants to Israel who are sponsored by the Jewish Agency and the Conservative (Masorti) Movement. The program is part of the Agency's Aliya 2.000 effort and is unique in that the immigrants will be directly absorbed in the Kiryat Bialik community, where a Masorti community already exists.

The Kiryat Bialik Municipality is also sponsoring the project. The idea behind the effort is to try to bring groups of families who are part of the Conservative community in their home countries to places in Israel where a Masorti the potential immigrants with community already exists and can help absorb them. information about Kiryat Bialik, families, including 30 children, arriving this morning.

The newcomers are to be taken initially to the Kiryat Yam absorption center, where they will study, Hebrew and explore job possibili-ties. Members of the local Masorti i congregation will adopt them and try to case their initial absorption. A Jewish Agency spokesman said the Masorti movement officials and the Jewish Agency hope to expand the program to include other communities here.

PARIS (Reuters) - A Paris court yesterday sentenced guerrilla mas-termind Carlos "the Jackal" to life in prison for killing two French secret agents and a Lebanese fellow revolutionary in 1975.

The 48-year-old Venezuelan revolutionary, blamed for more than 80 deaths and hundreds of injuries during his pro-Palestinian struggle in the 1970s and 1980s, was found guilty of murder with aggravating circumstances.

Carlos shouted "Long live the revolution" when the verdict was read yesterday and added some-thing else which was not heard distinctly.

One journalist suggested the Marxist gunman may have added "Allah Akbar" (God is Great) in Arabic but others present disputed this.

Carlos will appeal the life sentence passed on him, his lawyer said.

"I told Carlos last night to file the appeal as soon as he returned to Fresnes prison," lawyer Isabelle Coutant-Peyre said. "If he is unable to do so, we will file the appeal on Friday at the law . courts when he is received by an investigating magistrate handling another case," she said. She said she gave her advice to.

Prosecutor Gino Necchi argued on Monday that the evidence fully supported a guilty verdict and urged the jury to send Carlos to Playing to a handful of "fans" among the spectators, he asked: prison for the rest of his life. In his address, Carlos boasted that his exploits on behalf of the Popular Front for the Liberadon of Palestine had brought "hundreds of millions of dollars" to the Palestinian resistance. He denounced "world Zionism" as about "the McDonaldization of humanity."

Police say three witnesses described Carlos's role in the shootings to them within hours of the event, although none of the three could be found for the trial. The prosecution said Carlos boasted of the killings in letters to several friends, in a newspaper interview, in a telephone conversation with an associate who later wrote about their chat in a book and in conversations with diplomats seized during his most daring escapade - the kidnapping of 11 oil ministers in Vienna later in 1975

But his lawyer Olivier Maudrut questioned why the witnesses could not now be found and why only a photograph was displayed of a key letter said to be in Carlos's hand.

In that lener, prosecutors said, he wrote of sending Monkharbal "to a bener world" for having betraved him.

"A person cannot be condemned to life in prison based on a photocopy," Maudrut said.

At times angry and brimming with hate, at other omes cracking jokes and poking fun at himself, Carlos look an acove role in his own defense during the eight-day trial, frequently jumping to his feet with a sarcastic remark or 10 question a witness in his beavily Spanish-accented French.

His trial is likely to be only the first step on a long judicial path. French antiterror magistrate Jean-Louis Bruguiere is investigating him for three Paris bombings which killed five people in 1974 and 1982, a 1983 bombing which killed five in Marseille's train station and two bomb attacks people died in 1982 and 1983. He is also wanted in Germany for the bombing of Berlin's French cultural center and in Austria for the 1975 kidnapping of the 11

ACTEAL, Mexico (AP) - The 5-year-old boy was sitting on a bench in the clapboard church, praying for an end to the civil war that has convulsed this subsistence farming area for four years. Gunshots rang out, and Juan Vazquez Luna ran outside. Seventy men were marching down dirt paths, firing with AK-47s at anyone who moved. Juan followed bundreds of people scrambling down the mountain toward the river. Women hauled babies in shawls.

Men carried toddlers by the waist. People tripped on the undergrowth, making their way down the bill to what they thought would be safety. But the gunmen followed them down, shooting. Soon, the packed earth along the river was covered in

Europe rediscovers religion

Be it imported from afar, recovered from old or renewed in a contemporary idiom, Europe is suddenly defying its contemporary image as the planet's most Godless quarter.

By CHARLES TRUEHEART

VALENCIA, Spain -- At the end of winter every year, this corner of Europe is thronged for four days and nights of singing, dancing and firecracker-popping that climax in a fiery exorcism. The phenomenon not Catholicism, exactly, but the distinctly local religion of the fallas - dates back to the Middle Ages but has never been so popular or elaborate as in the last couple of decades Priestless and only barely sacred, this faith is rooted in more than 400 "associations" that gather in neighborhood clubhouses --- usually little more than a clutch of card tables in a local tavem.

Throughout the year, hundreds of omate and outrageous 75-foot (23 m.) tall papier-mache monuments, the fallas, are designed and built at huge time and expense, borne solely by offerings from the people. Then, on the appointed night, the fallas are set to the torch in massive bonfires of release and redemption. As an indication of a community of faith, measured in participation, financial support, spinituality, tradition and sacred rite, a real church in Europe could do no better, and seldom does as well, as the fallas.

"This is what I identify with, this is where my faith is," said Celedonio Toledo, a welder in the fallas club in the Valencia suburb of Masanasa. "If I weren't doing this, I wouldn't be doing anything religious at all." Valencia's feast of the fallas, held in mid-March every year, is among a host of new ways Europeans are channeling the spiritual energy that science and state and a loss of religious memory have been unable to extinguish.

Late-century Europe can easily be called the most Godless quarter on earth. That, in any case, has been the prevailing wisdom. But today, following the rest of the world, Europe is effervescent with new religiosity, be it imported from afar, recovered from old or renewed in a contemporary idiom.

More than half of Europe's citizens still profess to be Catholics, and nearly a third identify themselves as Protestants. Yet few attend church regularly - a century-old trend whose pace quickened in the social upheavals of the 1960s. The most obvious sign and most profound consequence has been the tumble to near extinction of the traditional parish church and the geographically based congregation that sustained it. "Many Europeans have ceased to belong to their religious institutions in any meaningful sense, but they have not abandoned --- so far -many of their deep-seated religious motivations," said Grace Davie, a sociologist of religion at the University of Exeter in England. No one is certain just how large the new movements are; much of the religious ferment is happening on the margins of established religions. But signs of h can be found throughout the continent.

The Spaniards are creating a national patchwork of local, Christian-inspired but overtly secular religions. The French are sampling Buddhism and massing on pilgrimages to shrines of obscure saints. The Italians are returning to long-buried Catholic forms and ideals in communities of renewal. The British are modernizing their parish life and feeding a hunger for Bible study. The Swedes are reclaiming their church from the clutches of their state. The Germans are struggling to absorb and convert a virtually de-Christianized East German population. And all Europeans are learning to live with the growing presence of Islam. For a quarter-century, Europe has welcomed Protestant evangelism imported or copied from North America. Baptists, Methodists, Assemblies of God, Jehovah's Witnesses, even Episcopalians, are spreading their message with slow but growing success. Europe no less than the United States has cottoned to New Age Hinduism, spiritualism, Transcendental Meditation, the Unification Church, Krishna Consciousness, occultism, faith healing. The Church of Scientology is locked in struggle with the German government to enhance its tax status as a certified religion. Cults also have made a mark in Europe, most recently with the selfimmolation of members of the Order of the Solar Temple. Religious books, on Buddhism and Jesus alike, are best-sellers. This season's French religious best-seller is the ultimate spiritual cafeteria line: The two-volume, 2,469-page, eight-pound, $120 Encyclopedia of World Religions. True religious pluralism is a new fact of life on a continent long dominated by two major Christian churches. Its centuries of religious wars and the Holocaust may be history, but the rhetorical foundations of a secular society are being shaken anew by the continent's growing Moslem community that has made Islam the third religion of France, Germany and Britain.

Much of a new generation is coming of age with little or no religion as a point of cultural and personal reference. The post-World War II generation could still remember a tradition; but since they didn't pass it on, their children are religious blank slates.

For some this is an opportunity. The young "know nothing of religion, so they have no prejudices against it," observed Neil Blongh, a Mennonite church historian in a Paris suburb. "Some of them even think Jesus and God are American inventions," Such are the spiritual temptations for the young that Nick Cuthbert, founding pastor of a contemporary-style Protestant church in a suburb of Birmingham, England, devoted a recent Sunday message to the pitfalls of easy belief --- and in so doing suggested what the old churches, even the ones trying to modernize, are up against in today's thriving European religious marketplace. He named Ouija boards, The X-Files, witchcraft, levitation, divination, fortune-telling, palmistry and astrology.

Many young people exhibit a phe-nomenon familiar to American sociologists of contemporary religion: "zapping" among religions, surfing for faiths that appeal to them. A French term for it is bricolage, loosely translated as do-it-yourselfism. "Religion, like so many other things, has entered the world of options, lifestyles and preferences," Davie said,

"We believe, but we don't practice," said Vicente Gamon, an electrician, one evening at his local fallas clubhouse in Valencia. Across the table, Juan Costa, a mason, put it differently. "We are Catholics, but we are not believers," he said. "Each one of us takes Catholicism at his own speed and approach .... My parents taught me about God, but the ideas didn't conform to reality, so in the course of my life I created my own." Although regular churchgoing is down steeply in Europe, attendance at major religious events - notably during the Christmas season - is up. Increasingly, faith is being expressed not in ordinary habit but in extraordinary acts of participation like the fallas.

The phenomenon is repeated across Spain and Portugal, and across the European continent at local saints' festivals and quasi-religious rituals. The most ancient form of extraordinary religious ritual, the pilgrimage, is enjoying a startling new life. Pilgrim magazine in France circulates to 340,000 customers every week. Take the shrine of St. Therese of the Christ Child in the French town of Lisieux. A Carmelite nun who died of tuberculosis 100 years ago at the age of 24, St. Therese left behind letters and other writings and an example of humility and piety that have earned her a place of extraordinary popularity among even disen-gaged Catholics, and intellectual spect among priests and theolo-

The Basilica of Lisieux, said the Rev. Raymond Zambelli, its rector, has become "an oasis, an island, a place to stop and catch your breath" - and a destination for nearly two million pilgnims every year.

Perhaps the most impressive recent sign of what French sociolo-gist Daniele Hervieu-Leger describes as a burgeoning "pilgrim." sensibility" was Pope John Paul II's global youth rally on the Longchamp racetrack in Paris last August. For weeks before, the French media reported disappointing advance numbers for the World Youth Days festival. France's rock-

But as it turned out, more than a million young people from across the continent, well over half from France, numed up for the pope's address at an outdoor event that struck many observers as a Christian Woodstock, a merger of a rock concert and a worship service. It left the French Catholic church marveling and wondering how to turn that latent religiosity into deeper faith or even regular practice.

The problem for the pope - and the reality of the religious scene across Catholic Europe - is that the young people who came to Longchamp "never set foot in church," said Hervieu-Leger. For her, the event suggested opportunities for a renewed Catholicism if it recognizes the late-20th century appeal of the mass pilgrimage

It is everything parish life is not mobile rather than stable, based on the individual rather than the territory of a parish, voluntary rather than obligatory, extraordinary rather than ordinary," Hervieu-Leger said. It is also "modular," she said - those who come feel the freedom to pick and choose, to express their admination for the pope and the Catholic tradition while rejecting the church's teachings on contraception and abortion.

If the million-plus who flocked to Longchamp to see the pope were at least nominally religious actors, those who flocked and continue to flock to the edges of the tunnel where Princess Diana died in Paris August 31 are also pilgrims of a vaguely spiritual kind, praying, crying and laying flowers at an improvised shrine. She was "an archetype, a kind of modern saint," said Frederic Lenoir, a French scholar of religion.

Jacques Duquesne, whose two recent books retelling the life of Jesus have been runaway best-sellers in France, said this youthful religiosity "is not a profound faith." He said, "The young look for occasions to get together. 'It's fun. Let's go.' The church to them is like Annesty International. It's very good on human rights, but when it interferes in your personal life, they don't want it." The Washington Post

As the remainder of the ex-communist federation struggles to pick up the pieces after years of bloodshed, the Slovenian president has acquired the reassuring familiarity of "old money" for his citizens, but still has regrets.

"If I could change anything in the past, I would have tried to find more support in those republics of the former Yugoslavia that were facing the most cruel future, but did not understand what Slovenia wanted or that what we wanted was in their interest," he said in an interview.

Kucan says the idea of breaking away from communist Yugoslavia began to take shape in his mind about 10 years ago, and his regret is that the thinking behind it alienated or unnerved the rest of the onetime federation instead of spurring the same new beginning. He had been Communist Party

First as Communist Party leader and then as president of Yugoslav Slovenia from 1990, Kucan encouraged small-scale private enterprise and allowed an unofficial political opposition.

On Saturday night, stones were thrown at Nahum and Yael Shahori's car on the Beit Jubrin-Gush Etzion road, in the Hebron area. The car overturned.

Nahum, who is a liaison officer to the Palestinian Police in Hebron, is hospitalized at Hadassah-University Hospital, Ein Kerem. The following night, shots were fired at an army post in the area. Security officials fear this is just the beginning. Natshe says that of the 10,000 people who lived in the Hebron casbah before the Six-Day War, only 2,000 remain. The rest, he says, caved in to the threats of the settlers and left.

Today, he is baving difficulty getting permits to build 122 homes so that some of the original residents can return.

Another problem is the sewage system. The settlers near the Avraham Avinu Synagogue disconnected a major sewage tunnel 1.2 meters in diameter from the main system, for fear that bombs coulo be planted inside.

Instead, they laid a bypass pipe that is only 70 cm. wide. The wide sewage tunnel now serves only the Jewish families; the pipe serves the rest of the city. So it's no wonder that in the winter, the streets are flooded with rainwater mixed with sewage. It's no wonder that there's frustration. Natshe is doing his best. But none of this seems to bother Arafat. He's going to build his palace. And a palace it will be, with a reception hall, luxurious living quarters, a fountain out front, a pool in the back, and a helipad just to the north. For this he will find money.

An American accent On Tuesday night, US President

Bill Clinton lit a Hanukka candle at the White House. Pupils from a Jewish school in Washington, DC sang "Maoz Tzur." The White House chefs served what looked sort of like sufganiyot, sort of like doughnuts. Another event that demonstrates the cooling of US-Israeli relations.

In 32 other capitals, the candlelighting ceremonies were held in the presence of Israeli diplomats and the beads of the local Jewish community. In the Vatican, the Israeli ambassador spoke. But in Washington, the capital of our great friend, the ambassador was not invited, nor was his No. 2. Phooey on the embassy. Petitions to the White House were in vain. Pleas to National Security Adviser Sandy Berger to invite Israel's official representatives were in vain. It was only because of the intervention of Merv Adelson, a personal friend of the president's, and others involved in the Jubilee Celebrations Committee, that Clinton even agreed to announce at the ceremony that it marked the opening of the State of Israel's 50th anniversary celebrations.

The chill winds blowing from Washington toward Jerusalem seem especially blatant when you consider the view the Clintons bave from the porch of their White House living quarters. A huge hanukkia standing on the main road on the bank of the Potomac, with the Washington Monument in the background, casts a shadow over the big White House Christmas tree, which is surrounded by the 50 smaller Christmas trees. one from every state.

And in the exclusive mall at 2000 Pennsylvania Avenue, only two blocks from the White House, which houses the Clintons' favorite restaurant, Hanukka songs alternate with Christmas carols over the sound system, and "Jerusalem of the traditional "Merry Christmas" has been replaced with the neutral "Season's Greetings," or "Happy Holidays," so as not to offend Jews in the audience. The clear goodwill in the US towards Jews and Israel makes one wonder why our diplomats are so out of the loop they can't get invited to a Jewish event at the White House, even when they beg. Not that one ambassador or chief of mission can make or break the two countries' relationship, but it's unfortunate that they can't use this goodwill to our advantage, particulary at this time.

The security memorandum After the mutual recriminations between the political echelons and the IDF brass, officers from the IDF Planning Branch sat down with men from the GSS to review the draft security agreement, in preparation for further discussions with the Americans and the Palestinians. Sources in Jerusalem explain that basically, Israeli and Palestinian security officials met for a general discussion on a security agreement. The Israelis made suggestions. The Palestinians made suggestions. The local CIA representative wrote up a draft. No one signed anything. No one committed to anything.

The Palestinians said that Israel could forget about the PA extraditing wanted terrorists, and suddenly made the principle of reciprocity holy: "You want us to take weapons away from Hamas, then take the weapons away from your extremists. You want us to fight against the terrorist infrastructure. then let's see you prevent violence by Jews. You want us to stop 'revolving-door' justice, then don't you grant any pardons. You want us to remove Palestinian Police officers with 'blood on their hands,' then you do the same."

A model of one of PA Chairman Yasser Arafat's planned palaces, complete with a reception hall, luxurious living quarters, a fountain, a pool and a helipad. (Flash 90)

The government blames the army. Ariel Sharon and Yitzhak Mordechai vehemently criticized the document. The army officers responded that the whole memorandum was a political document that professional soldiers should not be dealing with.

During the four years that the Likud was in the opposition, its leaders yelled that the government was "politicizing" the army by involving it in the discussions with the Palestinians. Since this government was formed in June 1996, it has not managed to put together a political staff that could deal properly with the diplomatic-political questions resulting from the negotiations with

Arafat. So it threw the burden back on the defense establishment. And yet, during the four years of the Primarily intended for specialists in Judaica, this catalogue of 1,066 manuscripts (No. 52 in the Cambridge Oriental Publications series) is a major landmark in Hebrew bibliography. Thanks to the resources of our computer age, it now supersedes earlier listings hy Solomon Schiller-Szinessy (1876), Herbert Loewe (1927), and Jacob Leveen.

As director of Genizah Research and head of Cambridge University Library's Oriental Division, Stefan Reif has become an internationally renowned scholar. He spent the 1996-97 academic year here as a visiting professor at the Hebrew University and also appeared on television.

His introduction, "Hebrew and Hebraists at Cambridge," surveys the role of learned Christians (and the occasional Jewish apostate such as John Immanuel Tremellius) who, from the 16th century onward, not only taught Hebrew but also enriched their college libraries with Hebrew books. Like their Harvard brethren in New England, many Cambridge men were zealous rabbinical scholars. Ralph Cudworth, master of Clare and regius professor of Hebrew, penned verse in the holy tongue glorifying Charles I, Richard Cromwell, and finally Charles II as well.

According to Reif, "the academic self-indulgence which led scholars to extol their leaders in a language which they [the leaders] could not read was also to be found among preachers desirous of impressing their congregations with the sheer incomprehensibility of their sermons. The Westminster Assembly of 1644 attempted to strike a hlow for more democratic religious education by prohibiting the use of Hebrew in the pulpit, but there is evidence to suggest that churchgoers felt cheated if homi-lies were delivered in a language wholly with-in their intellectual grasp." Exchanging the Catholic mystique of Latin for the Protestant one of Hebrew was evidently a by-product of the Reformation.

Although Isaac Abendana, a brother of the Sephardi haham, earned a modest livelihood through private tntoring and translating at Cambridge (1663-1675), a "religious test" maintained there over the next 200 years barred a professing Jew from any university teaching post. That form of discrimination ended when Solomon Schiller-Szinessy, in practice a traditional Jew but politically a radical (he had fought in the 1848 Hungarian revolution under Kossuth), was appointed first lec-turer (1866) and then reader (1875) in talmudic yndon B. Johnson secretly tape-recorded some 9,500 and rabbinic literature. Like Oxford, however, Cambridge made sure that the regius professorship of Hebrew kept its ties with the Church of England.

Schiller-Szinessy encouraged the university librarians to purchase valuable manuscripts from Jewish booksellers in Central Europe. Thanks to his specialist knowledge, two volumes were also printed, listing and describing 97 of the Hebrew manuscripts in the university's possession (1876); about 400 of the remaining manuscript works had been catalogued by hand prior to his death in 1890, but this comprehensive guide remained unpublished. His work was continued by Solomon Schechter, who made Cambridge a focus of scholarly interest and research, being responsi-hle for the acquisition of the Cairo Genizah's treasures in 1897.

The next systematic attempt to catalogue the growing manuscript collection was made by Herbert Loewe (the grandson of Sir Moses Montefiore's learned secretary and interpreter), whose preface to a Handlist of Hebrew and Samaritan Manuscripts in the Library of the University of Cambridge (1927) is reproduced on pp. 37-44. After his retirement as keeper of the Department of Oriental Printed Books and Manuscripts at the British Museum in 1956, Jacob Leveen undertook the preparation of a revised catalogue which, after 14 years (in 1973), was still incomplete.

That task, finally entrusted to the Genizah Research Unit's director, Stefan Reif, has now been discharged with the publication of this volume in 1997.

HIS CATALOGUE, to which numerous indexes are appended, tells us everything we may wish to know about a given manuscript its catalogue number and provenance: its size, form, and condition; the works included and their author(s): details of any illuminated pages or colophon; when it was written and the scribe's name; who once owned the manuscript; and when and from whom it was acquired. These Hebrew MSS cover a vast range of subjects, from the Bible, Talmud, and liturgy to anthologies of verse, scientific works, legal documents, and correspondence, oot to mention Samaritan, Karaite, and more obscure writings as well. Between pp. 300 and 301 there are 32 plates showing how some of them appear and different types of Hebrew script (Ashkenazi and French, Byzantine, Egyptian, Italian, Oriental, Provençal, Sephardi, and Yemenite).

One of the most famous and valued items in this collection is the second-century BCE Nash Papyrus, on which the Ten Commandments and part of the Shema are written.

A manuscript's dating (by the scribe) is usually - but not invariably - accurate. Describing a Spanish illuminated Bible, for example, Reif notes that "the chronogram yields Tuesday 18 February AD 856. This date (which has been altered) is certainly not relevant to the current codex, the writing and ornamentation of which are characteristic of Sefardi Bibles of the fourteenth and fifteenth centuries."

Prayer books of the Roman and Italian, Provencal, and French and Ashkenazi rites often bear the name and mark of a papal censor, who frequently erased words or passages "offensive to Christianity." Thus, in a 15th-century French siddur, "the usual erasure occurs in the 'alenu (f. 12v)." This indicates that a sentence in the Aleynu prayer's first paragraph (actually drawn from Isaiab 30:7 and 45:20) was thought to reflect on Jesus and accordingly blacked out!

Referring to Herbert Loew's comprehensive Handlist, Reif observes that the estimated cost of printing 500 copies in 1935 was just £557, but the University Library "somehow found reasons not to proceed with the publication." By 1956, the cost of publishing a slightly updated version of the same (by James Pearson and Herbert's son, Raphael Loewe) had risen to about £1,560, and scholars were then forced to make do with photocopies of the typescript. If the present weighty volume is anything to judge by, Cambridge University Library must now have more sensible administrators or far greater resources at its disposal, or both.

> of the Communist Party USA. Eveo LBJ's vice presidential choice, Minnesota Sen. Hubert Humphrey, a noted civil rights champion, heartily recommends dismissing Mississippi activists: "We're just not dealing with ... emotionally stable people."

Johnson becomes so deeply depressed over the supposed threat that the Mississippi tussle 10 25 represents to his re-election that he seriously considers withdrawing from the race just two days before he's nominated by acclamation. "I know that I'm not the best in the country," he dejectedly tells aide George Reedy. A close reading of Taking Charge will convince you that Johnson was dead right.

n his first visit to Israel in March 1960, the superstar evangelist Billy Graham was not exactly welcome. With Israel's Orthodox community constantly jittery about Christian missionaries, Graham, who had chalked up a remarkable number of converts in his crusades around the world, was perceived as a dangerous threat.

Although he described his tour here as a "success" and a "wonderful experience," the archives of The Jerusalem Post suggest that his path was figuratively if not literally lined with thoms. While he was able to hire church halls and other Christian sites for meetings in Jerusalem, Nazareth and Haifa, he couldn't get a hall in Tel Aviv. The United Christian Council of Israel tried to secure ZOA House and failed. The results were no better with the Mann Auditorium, and the reason for the unavailability of these premises was soon traced to the Foreign Ministry, which made no attempt to deny its role. Dr. Graham could have the

It is estimated that Billy Graham Crusades "have reached more than 200 million people in person," and millions more have beard or seen him through the media. Any way you look at his career, it is amazing how far this North Carolina farm boy has come.

Although he tries to make it appear otherwise, he has had an extraordinary impact on American politics, enjoying close relations with every president from Dwight Eisenhower to Bill Clinton. He played golf with some of them, prayed with all of them, and had particularly warm friendships with Lyndon Johnson and Richard Nixon.

Graham maintains that he was the one who persuaded Gerald Ford to grant Nixon a pardon after the Waterpate affair.

Written as a simple, straightforward narrative, the book is a quick read, but it doesn't really tell you everything you ever wanted to know about Billy Graham but were afraid op-selling author Olivia Goldsmith, who remembers how difficult it was for her to get her first book published, convinced her publisher HarperCollins to sponsor a contest to the in with her latest novel. The Bestseller, about five writers trying to achieve a breakthrough.

The 7,000 entries, when piled up in a small office, reached higher than Goldsmith's waist. The manuscripts were all works of anpublished anthors, cursed with, as Goldsmith puts it, "the need to tell a story, the courage to place word after word, like brick after brick, until the bulwark of the structure rises above the mud huts around you." And the winner was Dalia. Rabinovich's Flora's Suitcase, a novel about the lives of Jewish immigrants in Latin America. It grew out of a project begun at Brooklyn College, where she earned a degree in creative writing. Flora's Suitcase will be published by HarperCollins.

PLAGIARISM, or a psychological abberation? A touch of mystery surrounds romance novelist Janet Dailey's admission to plagiarizing rival romance writer Nora Roberts. Roberts is suing Dailey for copyright infringement, and will donate any money she receives in a settlement to the Literacy Volunteers of America. Dailey asserts that her liftings were "essentially random and non-pervasive acts of copying" due to a pyschological disorder. "I have already begun treatment for the disorder, and have been assured that, with treatment, this behavior can be prevented." The psychological name of this specicific behavioral disorder remains undisclosed.

IN A LETTER to the editor of the Library Association Record, Elleen Davies of Oxford draws attention to what must be one of the earliest recorded copyright disputes" in history. It involves St. Columba, whose death 1,400 years ago was marked this year. As a young monk in Ireland, Columba copied a manuscript of his master St. Finnian without his knowledge. A dispute arose as to who owned the copy. and King Diarmid settled it in Finnian's favor. Columba took exception to the king's decision, and started "a rather bloody war." The Irish Church excommunicated and exiled him. Made a pilgrim, Columba found a safe haven on the Scottish island of Iona, Ms. Davies quips that he might now be counted as the "patron saint of photocopiers."

Misunderstanding on security

Tt is unfortunate, if almost inevitable, that a detail. The question is whether such a progressecret Israeli-Palestinian agreement on securi-Ly cooperation leaked out before it was completed. What is hard to understand is why govemment sources would start criticizing parts of the agreement, thereby picking another fight with the security establishment.

The sbort, 16-point document, titled "Memorandum of Understanding on Security," is a potentially critical element in the resuscitation of the peace process, because it outlines the practical steps the Palestinians will take to combat terrorism. What is striking about the document is not so much what the Palestinians commit to do, but that most of its clauses apply to Israel as well. Ministers and officials are reacting to the document as to a case of "reciprocity" coming back to bite the hand that fed it. The government evidently made reciprocity the centerpiece of its peace policy, never thinking that the war on terror itself was to be reciprocal.

In practice, the government is right that, despite isolated examples to the contrary, there is no symmetry between the threat of terrorism against Israelis and against Palestinians, Israelis who have resorted to terrorism can be counted on one hand, and their names have gone down in infamy among the vast majority of their countrymen. On the Palestinian side, there is a very live conflict between organizations that support terrorism and those which do not, with each side receiving substantial popular support. The Palestinian Authority itself bas implicitly linked its commitment to combat terrorism to the temperature of the peace process, rather than making a "relentless" (as US Secretary of State Madeleine Albright has demanded) effort to eliminate terrorism for good.

On the other hand, it is hard to see why Israel should be concerned about committing to combat the largely theoretical threat of Israeli terror against Palestinians. First, Israe! already, and for its own reasons, must be vigilant against istacliextremists who resort to violence against placetimians Second, USEnectionen variet, as a whole were to reject cereorism as deeply and fundamentally as has Ismeli society. Israeli security and the peace process would rise to an entirely different plane.

A more valid reason to treat the leaked document with skepticism would be that it reiterates promises that have been made many times over. since the beginning of the Oslo process. Each sion is not like speaking louder to someone who does not understand the language you are speaking.

At this point, what matters more than the exact drafting of the document is whether the difficult practical elements of security cooperation have been worked out. A number of clauses in the document, for example, refer to the sharing of information. How much information sharing actually takes place will depend on the trust that is built between the security services on each side. That trust cannot be written into the agreement itself; it must be built over time, on the ground, and is much more easily destroyed than it is constructed

In this vein, it is a major mistake for government officials to exhibit distrust in the military leaders who have been assigned the task of negotiating the security agreement. The political level has not only the right but the obligation to provide a level of judgment separate from the military level. But any differences should be ironed out internally, not in front of the Palestinians, let alone in public.

It is precisely the danger of undermining the trust that must exist between Israeli and Palestinian security services that makes the use of military officers as negotiators problematic. As opposition leader, Binyamin Netanyahu was rightly critical of the government for turning generals into negotiators; he should listen to his own advice.

When Netanyaho brought OC Planning Brancb Maj.-Gen. Shlomo Yanai with him to Paris to brief Albright and American generals be was right to be proud that he had brought the process to a new level of detail. But putting the same Yanai in charge of negotiating an agreement on security cooperation risks crossing the fine line between the roles of diplomats and generals. The proper role of generals is to provide professional advice to the political level and to work out the details of implementation once. "greements are signed' The leaked security." document is not vet detailed enough to provide the forces on the ground with the practical guidance they need to implement full security cooperation. Now that the leak has shaken things up anyway, it would be a good opportunity to create a more proper division of labor: let the politicians agree on general principles and let the security services work out the n the eve of her planned visit to Junathan Pollard a week ago, Communications Minister Limor Livnat told CNN that, as a result of a Foreign Ministry briefing prior to her departure, she believed that Pollard's actions for Israel while a US Naval intelligence officer was a "rogue operation."

Next day, as she entered Pollard's cell, he said to her: "I thank you for coming to see me. The only reason wby I have been a prisoner for 13 years is based on the false concept that I was engaged in a rogue operation. Successive Israeli govern-ments have used that lie to deny responsibility for my actions. The US will never release me until the Israelis begin to tell the truth."

.In response to her shocked expression, Pollard explained if Israel had admitted he was their paid agent "the Americans were prepared to sweep the matter under the rug. I would not have spent a single day in prison. George Shultz, the secretary of state who was sympathetic to Israel, felt precisely the same way. I would have been put on a plane to Israel and that would have been the end of the affair."

According to testimony of a Shultz aide, the Israelis were told: "Ask Aviem Sela (one of Pollard's three handlers) to give us an affidavit about the ruth: Pollard admitted all the details and passed 15 lie detector tests to prove it. We need all this in writing. If it supports Pollard we can be friends again."

The Israeli government decided against this advice, for such an mission would have forced thendefease minister Yitzhak Rabin as well as premier Shimon Peres to resign. Their "washing their hands" document claiming that Pollard's

Such a shame, we say. The people down there are right: The government has to spend more money on Ofakim and all those other depressed development towas. We have to build them up. This is what the poor people down there are telling us, and, as well-intentioned middle-class folks, we're with them all the way.

Tazis are back. In the past year, Switzerland has suf-fered an international black eye over boarding Nazi gold; France, under President Jacques Chirac, has begun to confront the legacy of the Vichy regime, and Austria has a right-wing candidate, Joerg Haider, who may become chancellor in the 1998 elections. Nowhere, however, has the Nazi past become a more disputed subject than in a reunited Germany.

After traveling to Frankfurt, Berlin and Munich this month, it becomes clear to me that the problem in Germany isn't remembering the past. Museums, exhibitions and memorials on the Nazi era are everywhere. Strange as it may sound, Germany's difficulty is that it spends too much time reflecting on the past - and not enough time tackling very real Nazi phenomena that have emerged since 1989. In short, memory is substituting for action in Germany.

While public attention is focused on the Holocaust, two things are radically reshaping German society. The first is intellectual.

Novelists, journalists and professors have begun to espouse a more nationalistic line, not a Nazi one, but, nonetheless, one that stresses German power and identity and is hostile to foreigners and the United States, in particular. What alarms liberal Germans is that they believe the intellectuals are legitimizing another, far more disturbing trend: the reemergence of radical neo-Nazis, who have driven foreigners out of many towns in the former East Germany and heavily penetrated the federal army.

Since 1989, when the Berlin Wall fell, a self-proclaimed "new Right" movement of intellectuals, historians and professors who espouse German pride and patriotism has been on the rise. They are deeply anti-American because they see an American-style multicultural society as a threat to Germanness. Above all, whether the topic is World War II or current immigration, this new Right hopes to rehabilitate German nationalism by emphasizing communist atrocities to soft-pedal Germany's own misdeeds,

Germany's problem

JACOB HEILBRUNN

What is taking place in Germany is a war of memories. If you think Germany was guilty of a unique crime in seeking to exterminate European Jewry, then the country carries a special stigma that will always separate it from other countries. Hence, Germany must be more careful about flexing its muscles at home and abroad. But if you're part of the new Right, you have no patience with this notion. Germany is a normal country, like any other, and can assert its own interests without feeling ashamed of its history.

THE neo-Nazi infilmation of the Federal Defense Force, or army, shows for example that key officials have been aiding these sinister forces.

According to the army's own statistics, the number of neo-Nazi incidents in its own ranks has tripled in the past year. The most prominent case concerns a lawyer and neo-Nazi terrorist named Manfred Roeder. In 1982, Roeder was sentenced to 13 years in prison for participating in an attack that killed two Vietnamese asylum seekers.

He got early release for good behavior, but promptly began to agi-tate again on the neo-Nazi scene. He founded an organization for the "Re-Germanization of East Prussia."Amazingly, Roeder got money from the Foreign Office for his project. The Hamburg Military Leadership Academy invited him to give an address about bringing back Germans to East Prussia.

You're my nephew, and I don't want to see you buried here any longer.

they passed onto os. But chances are we don't have nepbews in Ofakim. The people there are very different from us, and we in the middle-class don't identify with them. So we can encourage their crippling illusions about rebuilding the development towns. It makes us feel generous.

And in a few days, when Ofakim is forgotten again, we won't be the ones to suffer the consequences of these illusions; they will. After all, we'll still be up bere, and they'll still be down there.

4. The only big-budget, star-studded Hollywood picture - and the only action movie - on my list is Face/Off, Hong Kong virtuoso John Woo's crazily passionate shoot 'em up, which features John Travolta and Nicolas Cage in AC-DC roles: the two switch charac-ters halfway through and ham it up as each other. Their performances are funny and strangely convincing, and Woo's choreography of their outrageous gun battles is, true to form, just as fluidly halletic as it is hyperbolically bloody. 5. They say the 30-40m, tree is 100 years old. It once stood in an apartment building courtyard, which was later enclosed around the tree. Later incamations of the courtyard kept the thick old landmark, which bursts through the ceiling like Jack's beanstalk.

10. And finally, I regret to report that one of the happiest surprises of my movie year was shared by few other viewers. For whatever reason, Big Night, a lovely little fable about food and families, money and art came and disappeared after just a few weeks here. Co-directed by actors Stanley Tucci and Campbell Scott, this wise and perfectly proportioned picture deserved much more than the reception it got locally: then again, the very subject it took on (the difficulty of maintaining at one and the same time aesthetic standards and balanced books) seems also to have been its undoing. With a few exceptions, boxoffice success and artistic quality were still, in 1997, several leagues apart.

traditional soul food might have been good for the spirit, but it was awfully tough on the body. Luckily, there's a major rethinking going on where this high-fat cuisine is concerned. Enthusiasts are incorporating its elements into new dishes, bringing it into sync with today's healthier habits.

Consider the version of hopping John below, for instance. Instead of combining black-eyed peas with the usual salt pork or bacon, we've tossed them with pasta and sun-dried tomatoes for a version that's bealthier - and kosber. We've also updated turnip greens with caramelized onions and added cumin to pan-roasted corn bread.

For dessert, oothing else would do but our Sweet Potato-Bourbon Tart. If eating black-eyed peas on New Year's Day is supposed to bring you luck, imagine how lucky you'll be when you start off the year with this healthfui menu.

The Church of the Nativity

Day Tripper By Hum Shape,

According to the centuries-old status quo regulating the holy places, the rights to most of the historic church are held by the Greek Orthodox.

ast night, the eyes and ears of much of the Western world, if not Israel, were on Bethlehem and on the Church of the Nativity, which marks the hirthplace of Jesus.

The fact that the midnight mass broadcast all over the world did not take place in the Church of the Nativity was only one of the paradoxes regarding this ancient shrine and the Christian presence in Bethlehem. Another is that the town, with so many Christian sites and associations, is mostly Moslem.

While Palestinian spokesmen have often accused Israel of being the cause of the Christian emigration, which is one of the reasons for this small Christian presence, Latin Patriarch Michel Sabbah described the phenomenon as a theological "mystery," Speaking at an international conference on religious liberty in Jerusalem last week. Sabbah noted that there had been largescale emigration by all communitics, Moslem as well as Christian, and even Jewish. He went on to say that the Christian presence in Jerusalem and its environs had always been small. The first Christian episcopate had been in Caesarea, then in Antioch, he noted.

whether the political situation between Israel and the Palestinians will become peaceful enough for the masses of pilgrims and tourists who once crowded the shrine to return. If there is peace, we can expect unprecedented numbers of visitors for the year 2000, marking two millennia of Christianity. But if there is no peace, even such a historic landmark will not bring visitors, who are not only fearful for their safety but unwilling to go to a place they imagine to be rife with strife.

For local visitors, I would recommend waiting for a sunny day on which there is no political unrest and making the short trip from Jerusalem to Bethlehem to see what is one of the country's most remarkable buildings. The church was built by Justinian in 540. It retains the historic basilica form: with two rows: of parallel columns supporting the roof.

From Manger Square, one enters through a small doorway so low that one must-stoop to enter. Whether this was a measure to force all those entering to pay obeisance, as some guides would have it, or a way of preventing conquerors from entering on

The enduring mystery of Oumran

BY ALLAN RABINOWITZ

n the 50 years since a Beduin boy stumbled upon a cave in Quimran filled with scrolls, the subsequent discoveries of hundreds of manuscripts known as the Dead Sea Scrolls have fascinated the world. Scores of books and thousands of articles have analyzed and speculated upon their place in first-century Jewish society, and possible links to early Christianity. Over the years the study of the scrolls itself became controversial, as various scholars, protecting their academic turf, hindered manuscript publication. The ruins of Qumran near the northwestern tip of the Dead Sea, where the scrolls were found, is now a national park. At first glance the most remarkable thing about the site is how unremarkable it is as an archeological excavation. Nevertheless, if you walk around the area you can begin to sense the lives of the men who isolated themselves here in the first century.

They were a community of Essenes, 2 movement which opposed the priestly establishment in Jerusalem, and their prolific writings expressed quasi-mystical interpretations of the Bible, a sense of impending apocalypse, and dedication to their own spiritual leader, rituals and collective functioning. The accounts of that Manual of Discipline, mesh with the evidence of the sparse ruins and the overall surroundings.

life, in such manuscripts as the

The cliffs looming above us to the west constituted the overwhelming reality for the members of the community. The harsh wilderness physically and symbolically blocked out Jerusalem, and was an expression of purity. On this stony crust between cliffs and a dead lake, where rain was rare, vegetation sparse and the heat pressed down like an iron lid, where one's energy was devoted to survival, this community attempted to live by religious and communal ideals that transcended personal goals, desires and needs. The water channel snaking down from the cliffs to the settlement, for example, and the numerous cisterns and water conduits within the settlement, show the high degree of skill and cooperation utilized to develop a system which tapped the seasonal floods plummeting from the high hills. From the central observation tower we can see the remains of the pottery workshop, where the jugs that protected the scrolls were probably shaped. Workshops also produced other crafts that supported the self-sustaining community. To the south, near the green line of vegetation at Ein Fash'ha, the Essenes tended date groves and other crops. Turning cast, we see Qumran National Park: If we linger until late in the day, we can watch the dusk settling as the Essences did. They chanted and studied in isolation in the stillness of the wilderness. (Ariel Jerozolimski) the cemetery which held about a thousand graves, dug over a peri-od of perhaps 150-200 years. There are few females, confirming the existence of a community composed largely of single, celihate males.

Significantly, there is no trace of sleeping quarters; evidently the members slept in tents or huts outside the perimeter of the main settlement, or perhaps in low-lying caves. The sprinkling of sandal nails found along the paths leading to the caves indicates regular foot traffic.

If we linger until late in the day, we can watch the dusk settling as the Essenes did, watch the hawks arcing near the cliffs, the shifting hues of the mountains beyond the Dead Sea and their reflection in the water. They could see the moonlight illuminate every boulder, and absorbed their observations of the stars into their cosmology. They chanted and studied in isolation, sinking into the engulfing sullness of the wilderness, then gathered for prayer, study, meals and work. Their daily regimen, the signs of which can be found in the ruins around us, followed Jewish ritual and law, yet simultaneously set this community apart as "the true community of Israel" (as one scroll phrased it) as opposed to the "habitation of unjust men." We see the kitchen, for example, where the communal meals were prepared, meals which became part of a "spiritual temple" and a substitute for sacrifices. The tefillin worn during morning prayers (Qumran has yielded the oldest ones_ever found) might vary in the texts they encased. Sundials found indicate that, using a solar calendar, the Qumran dates for festivals differed from those of the normative Jewish lunar calendar. And there was daily immersion before the communal meal, in the mikve, the remnants of which are still standing. This regular immersion, associated with the explation of sin, has led some scholars to link the sect to John the Baptist.

The heart of Qumran beat in the central building which abuts the stone observation tower. Based on the hits of pens, broken writing tables and ostraca found here, it appears that the Dead Sea Scrolls were written here, in an upper-story scriptonium, attached to a reading room, classroom and library. Stand here and picture the scribes and students hunched over writing desks day after day, pouring their hearts into what they considered their holy work. Here they copied the books of the Bible (only the scroll of Esther is missing from the finds, but a complete copy of Isaiah was among the first discoveries), and wrote commentaries, codes of behavior, scathing criticisms of the Temple ritual, and the document detailing an apocalyptic vision of a war between the "sons of light" and the "sons of darkness." And what were sect members thinking when they rolled and bound the scrolls, wrapped them in linen, placed them in jugs, and stored them in a series of caves? These are the questions we ask ourselves as we walk southwards. to look across a ravine at two of the caves which held scrolls. Carved out of the soft sedimentary bank, these are the only man-made caves in the area. Why were they cut here, close to the settlement, when there are so many natural caves among the cliffs? No one knows. And were the scrolls simply stored there, or were they hidden from the Roman legions advancing toward Ein Gedi and Masada? And if the scrolls were hidden, was the hiding an act of desperation or defiance?

Perhaps the members hiding these scrolls felt they were abandoning their life's work. Did they think they would return?

Or did they suspect that the scrolls would remain there for centuries after they and their settlement had disappeared? They couldn'i have known that these scrolls - testimony to the richness, the divisiveness, the range of thought of first-century Judea --- would lie in these caves for 2,000 years, to be found as another sovereign Jewish state was about to be born. In an ironic juxtaposition, on the same November day in 1947 that purchased by Professor E.L. Sukenik of the Hebrew University some of these 2,000-year-old Jewish scrolls returned to Jewish hands, the UN passed the resolution approving the creation of a Jewish state.

Then a colleague, who is soon to be married abroad, asked me to recommend some bridal salons, one of my first comments to her was that I didn't envy her taking a wedding dress in her luggage and having to get it pressed later.

I remember when I went to Australia a couple of years ago for my cousin's wedding. how carefully her gown had been transported from the dressmaker's studio to her home only 10 minutes' drive away, and how quickly it was hung to ensure that it would be in perfect condition for the great day. Because my colleague has only a few days at her disposal between the time she arrives in the US and the day of her wedding, she is reluctant to buy a gown there in case it requires time-consuming alterations. On the other hand, prices in New York are often a lot lower than those in Israel.

My suggestion to her was to try on gowns here to see what suits her, and once she knows what style looks best on her, she will waste far less time trying on other gowns in New York. And because there are balf sizes in America. she may not require alteradons at all.

"But I know what I want," she said. "Knowing what you want and finding what suits you is not exactly the same thing." I countered.

Most of us have fixed visions of ourselves as brides, and unless we are extremely wealthy, there's quite a gap between the dream and the reality. Moreover, our bridal images start to take shape when we're as young as three or four. By the time we do get married, our bodies have changed and sometimes so have our tastes and our attitudes.

In Israel, because most apartments tend to be small and have limited storage space, many brides prefer to rent a gown, even though the difference in the cost between renting and buying is often minimal. Even so, there are many brides who want to keep this precious reminder of one of the most important days in their lives. Some brides, bowever, would prefer to have a dress that can be easily adapted for post-wedding use rather than simply confining it to mothballs.

There are several factors to take into account if the bride wants to get maximum value out of the dress. Unless she doesn't mind making white her formal color, she should choose a gown in a fabric which lends itself to dyeing. The design should not be too elaborate and should include either a jacket or a detachable skirt.

A long, slim-fitting dress with a belted overskirt is one versatile solution. The overskirt can later serve as a cape. Alternately, if the bride wants to show off her figure and doesn't want a full skirt, a matching longsleeved jacket will give the dress a completely different look. If the dress is sleeveless or strapless, the jacket can be worn for the bridal ceremony and removed afterwards. Silk taffeta jackets in different colors and styles can enhance the gown on future occasions.

It's rare for a bride to go shopping for a gown without a relative or friend in tow, and while their advice may often be valuable. remember it's not their wedding, it's hers. If the bride-to-be really has her heart set on something, she should not let anyone else talk her out of it unless she's genuinely convinced that it doesn't flatter her at all.

A good idea would be to take a Polaroid camera along so the bride can be pho-

Often a player will buttonhole me with a memorable bridge hand. "I picked np a hand with eight solid spades, etc." Almost inevitably, the hand includes some long, strong suit. Indeed, most hands at the table are remembered for their powerful strength or distribution, while the less-obvious beanty of the game is often forgotten - lowly spotcards that late in the hand can play a subtle yet crucial role. Sometimes a contract appears to have no chance, but then suddenly a spotcard saves the day, shedding its light in what otherwise would have been a bridge player's darkest moment. Sometimes the reverse is true.

A good, example of this Hanukka-type scenario is this week's deal. Suppose you were the declarer in the North seat in a contract of three notrump.

This is the normal contract if North opens the bidding one notrump and South uses Stayman; then places the contract in three -you is the king of diamonds from, the East seat, and all seems lost. But then suddenly the 10 of diamonds appears under the king. On the ace of diamonds, which is led at trick two, the queen of diamonds appears as you follow with the jack. Then the nine of diamonds is cashed and, lo and urse, if East leads a at trick one, three notrump will be defeated.) When the deal was actually played (this past August in Winnipeg, in the Canadian Women's Team Championship), the real North-South in our diagram were Marylou Bert (North) and June Pocock (South). They avoided the three-notrump contract and reached instead the unusual contract of four spades on a four-two trump fit. Normally an eight-card fit is recommended for a trump suit, and someomes a seven-card fit is satisfactory. But for the declaring side to hold fewer trumps than the defenders is almost never seen. Yet the bidding was logical. After the one-club opening bid by North, East overcalled one diamond and South bid one spade. North reversed to two hearts and South, without strong support for either of his partner's suits and without a diamond stopper, bid three diamonds, asking her partner to bid three notrump if she held a diamond stopper. North supported spades instead (with the king-queen doubleton) and South placed the contract in game.

West led the queen of diamonds, and it appeared to declarer that she was about to achieve a great result. If the defense continued diamonds, she could ruff the third round in dummy with the queen of spades, cash the king of spades, return to hand with the ace of clubs, draw the trumps (assuming they broke 4-3) and run the club suit. That would result in 11 tricks! But the power of an eight-spot this time worked against her, snuffing out her happiest dream come true. East overtook the queen of diamonds with the king on the first trick and switched to the 10 of clubs. This strange play planted a worried thought in the mind of declarer. East must have the singleton 10 of clubs. With this in mind, declarer won the trick with the ace of clubs, cashed four rounds of spades, and led the four of clubs toward dummy's K-Q-J-.8. When West followed low, declarer put in dummy's S, playclubs and cashed two more diamond tricks to set the contract. It was a terrible ending for declarer, but the good news was that her team won the event and she was left with an exciting story to tell her grandchildren.

Some 170 million Israeli candles were sold in the build up to Hanukka, according to the Manufacturers Association. This fig-ure represents a 20 percent increase on last year's total. ### Diamond exports to Asia fall by $600m.

Diamond bourse to close Fridays due to industry crisis

By DAN GERSTENFELD

Diamond exports to Southeast Asia fell recently by 30-40 percent, which will translate into a loss of more than $600 million on an annual basis, Tzafrir Anbar, the diamond controller in the Mioistry of Industry and Trade said yesterday. According to figures the Ministry of Industry and Trade published, exports of polished dia-monds in 1996 amounted to a gross $5.3 billion, which is about 25% of the total value of Israeli goods exported.

Industry sources say that um-bling currencies, higher interest rates and slower economic growth in Southeast Asia and an economic slowdown in Japan are expected to lead to a sharp decline in diamond exports next year. The decrease in sales to Southeast Asia have had a negative impact on the cash flow of the whole diamond industry because the Asian customers usually pay in cash.

"My Asian customers who paid me cash were making up for the American clients who buy on credit," said one trader. "The fact that the cash flows have slowed makes the banks nervous, which in turn hurts the whole industry." Diamond dealers complained that exports to the Far East, which account for 40% of the world diamond sales, fell dramaucally during the last three months.

The mood in Asia is negative and nobody wants to buy luxury products now," said one diamond trader. Anbar said that exports to Japan have been falling gradually since the end of last year. "During the last few months the decline in exports to Japan increased almost 55% of the Israeli output. Industry sources said that stocks by 10% each month," he said. Exports of polished diamonds to are rising and prices are decreas-ing. The Israel Diamond Manufacturers Association said Japan, which until recently represenied 16-17% of total exports, plunged 59% in November to only yesterday that the similation has worsened because of the Asian $26m., compared with $63m. in the same period in 1996. During the first 11 months of the year, exports fell 25% to $481m. from turmoil. The association said that during the last year 2,000 workers left the industry, raising the num-$641 m. in the January-November ber of layoffs during the last sev-eral years to 7,000. period last year.

Exports to Hong Kong, the second-largest importer in Asia, fell 50% in November to $28m. from $57m. in the same month last year. During the first 11 months of 1997, exports to Hong Koog actually rose to $651m, from $615m, a year ago. The rise is mainly attributed to a sharp rise in the first months of the year.

Anbar said that losses were partly offset by a rise in exports to the US. which currently imports close plants on Fridays and shorten workdays. In addition, from now on the diamond exchange will close its trading hall on Fridays.

The economic slowdown in Asia is felt all over the diamond indus-try. Last week the world's leading diamond organization, De Beers, said that second-half 1997 sales of its uncut diamonds slumped 16% to $1.76 billion compared with the same period last year, amid the Asian crises. De Beers described the difference between the first and second halves of the year as a "dramatic contrast."

Industry sources predict that the situation will worsen next year with diamond exports falling further and leading to higher losses.

"We don't predict that the situation will improve in the near term or next year," Anbar said.

closing of many manufacturing plants led to the "shrinking of the industry to worrying levels." It should be ooted, however, that manufacturers were closing plants before the Asian crisis and moving them to East Asian countries where workers get lower wages. In a statement, the executive committee of the association recommeoded that manufacturers

Propper: Interest rates can't be slashed

By JENNIFER FRIEDLIN and news agencies

In an unexpected about face, Manufacturers Association President Dan Propper yesterday said that in light of difficulties in the Asian market, Israel can not afford to slash interest rates.

"Until a few months ago l believed a drastic reduction in interest rates would help the economy," Propper said during the association's annual press confereoce on the state of the ecooomy. "But since the crisis in Southeast Asia erupted, a drastic cut is no longer possible."

Propper has repeatedly called on the Bank of Israel to abandon its strict anti-inflationary monetary policy and lower interest rates by -2 percent. The base lending rate is currently at 13.4%.

Such a move now, however, would cause a run on capital that would destabilize the economy. Propper said, adding that the central bank should lower rates incrementally.

Propper said Israel is now in a period of stagflation and predicted that growth will total 2,4% in 1998, compared to a predicted 2%

Palestinian Authority Trade and Economic Affairs Minister Maher Elmatzri yesterday rejected an Israeli proposal to set up a joint administration to run Palestinian and Israeli industrial zones in the West Bank.

"We know Israel's intention is to confiscate more land in the West Bank and appropriate it to the setand that is why we rejected their offer." Elmatzri said, adding that the existence of industrial zones in areas under Palestinian control are of no concern to Israel and are the

A special comminee will take part in the discussions and will be headed by Palestinian official Adnan Samaram, he said. Sharansky's aide Roman Polansky called the Palestinian's decision regrettable.

Propper said he fears that the ills affecting the low-tech sector will spread to the the high-tech sector. Industrial investment will fall by 10% next year, Propper said, which will hurt all all the industries as well as high-tech research and development.

He also said that changes in the investment law are discouraging investors from investing in Israel. Last year the government cut investment aid grants from 34% to 24% in the periphery.

In order to return the economy to 5%-6% growth, Propper said that the government and the Bank of Israel should decrease public spending, increase the size of the grants offered to investors, continue privatizing, increase compenoon by breaking up monopolies and take measures to lower interest rates while safeguarding exports' profitability.

Propper also said that the econoshould be ready to tolerate my 105 inflation.

Japanese stocks rose, led by electronics makers such as Sony Corp., as investors targeled exporters with global operations, hoping a weaker yen will give them a pricing edge in overseas markets. Banks fell amid concern they'll take a hit if the plummeting South Korean won sparks loan defaults. Investors are also staying clear of sectors such as steel and construction, amid concern about the weakness of Japan's economy.

"Institutional investors doo't have much choice besides the blue chips," said Shinichi Nomo, a general manager at Yamatane Investment Management Co., who helps to manage 10 billion yen ($76.9 million).

during an abbreviated Christmas Eve session. The Dow Jones industrial average fell 31.64 points to 7,660.13

Most broad-market indicators also turned lower after an early round of bargain hunting on Tuesday's late downturn.

But with the US market closing early - and closed today for Christmas - many players chose to take a five-day weekend, and those who didn't weren't taking many chances in such a thinly traded session.

Declining issues outnumbered advancers by an 8-to-7 margin on the New York Stock Exchange, with 1,258 up. 1,443 down and 598 unchanged. NYSE volume totaled 263.31 million shares at the 1 p.m. closing bell, vs. 293.20 million at the same point on Tuesday.

The Standard and Poor's 500stock list fell 6.43 to 932.70, and the Nasdaq composite index fell 10.38 to 1,499.53, slipping below 1,500 for the first one since July.

Dollar little changed in pre-holiday trading

The dollar was little changed yesterday against major currencies as markets in Europe closed early and trading desks in New York were short-staffed ahead of the rise against the yen in coming days, many traders said, given the still cloudy outlook for many Asian economies, currencies and stock "There's still concern about what's happening in Korea and about Japan's own fragile banking system," said Robert Katz, a trader at MTB Bank. "That will direct the

The Korean government later announced that the Group of Seven industrialized nations and the International Monetary Fund will release $10b. of funds in coming weeks.

Holding the dollar back against the yen was persistent speculation that the Bank of Japan may try to boost its flagging currency by selling dollars today while markets elsewhere around the globe are closed. To be sure, many traders would take such action with few banks open on Christmas. "If intervention were effective in thin markets, then central banks would only ever intervene on Christmas Day, but they don't," said Steve Barrow, a currency strategist at Bear Steams International in London. "If you want to sell dollars, you've got to have someone to sell them to.

Also, Japan's Finance Ministry said it will postpone punishing banks whose capital-to-asset ratios don't meet minimum domestic standards. The government originally planned to impose sancoons . against such banks by April 1.

Platinum rises as supply seen limited

Precious metals

Platinum rose to its highest price for eight days as a drop to consumption in Japan, the world's largest market for the precious metal, isn't expected to be enough to undermine expectatioos that global demand will outstrip sup-being offset by growth in China and the US, according to a recent report from London-based Johnson Matthey Plc., the world's largest marketer of platinum. Platinum for immediate delivery rose $9.20, or 2.6 percept, to $364.20 an ounce.

US Bonds fall on hopes Asia may stabilize

US bonds fell yesterday for the first time in five days after Korea said it can pay its immediate debts and will get $10 billion in international aid sooner than expected, damping demand for the safety of US assets.

"The news that the bailouts are beiog lined up means maybe we're getting to the end of the immediate crisis" in Asian financial markets, said Liviogston Douglas, who helps manage

$1.3b. at Kiewit Investment Management Corp. in Omaha,

Nebraska. He hasn't bought or sold Treasuries lately and said yields could climb in coming weeks.

"It may be that the flight-toquality trade is coming to an end," Douglas said.

The benchmark 30-year bondfell 13/32, or $4.06 per $1,000 bond, to 103 4/32, raising its yield 3 basis points to 5.90 percent. The

The news from Korea is "burting US bonds by alleviating a little of the stress in Asia," said Andrew Brenner, head of global fixedincome trading at Firnat USA Inc. Bond yields fell more than half

than four years, as investors

parked money in relatively safe US assets to escape tumbling

Many also see Asia's economic slowdown chopping half a percentage point or more off US growth next year - good for Treasuries because it will likely keep inflation at bay. Inflacon eats into the value of bonds' principal and fixed payments. The consumer price index rose at an annual rate of 1.8% in the year's first 11 months, the slowest in a (Bloomberg) decade.

The budget package is meant to include an overall cut of NIS 2.3b., but on Tuesday Finance Minister Yaakov Neeman withdrew a proposal to cut child benefits payments by NIS 500m. under pressure from coalition MKs. The Treasury yesterday issued a statement saving it is looking for alternative ways to make the cut. The Treasury is against any tax hike as a replacement for the cut in [child] benefits and adds there is absolutely no foundation to the reports that say we are considering raising taxes," its statement savs. Meanwhile, the coalidon yester-

The Tourism Ministry yesterday denied a statement by Suha Arafat that Israel was delaying tourists' entry to Bethlehem, stressing that tourists are free to enter the town by private or public vehicle. In Nazareth yesterday, thousands of celebrants took part in the annual Christmas processioo, ied clergy. Christmas Eve mass was recited in 10 churches throughout the city, with the main observance at the Basilica of the Annunciation.

Last night in Jerusalem. President Ezer Weizman and his wife, Reuma, lit Hannuka candles with 350 international cooperation trainees from 60 countries and the Palestinian Authority. The event, which also marked by scouts, schoolchildren, and Christmas and the upcoming month of Ramadan, was held at the Park Plaza Hotel.

At the Vatican, meanwhile, in a iovous Christmas message to the world. Pope John Paul II hailed the Jews as the people who gave Jesus to all mankind.

His gesture during midnight Mass carried a special resonance, coming the day after a Hanukka candle was lit at the Vatican for the first time in history.

Premiership: Floodlight failure was not a betting coup

LONDON (Reuters) - Reports linking floodlight failures to a Far East betting ring were dismissed as conjecture by the English premier league yesterday. The Wimhledon-Arsenal match on Monday was the third premier league clash this season to be abandoned when the foodlights failed. The score at the time was 0-0. A report in the Daily Express yesterday suggested a Far East gambling group was responsible for sabotaging the match. But premier league spokesman

Mike Lee said: "Currently, there is nothing that substantiates these stories." He said the evidence pointed to "technical failure." Police are to check to see if any equipment was tampered with. The Express quoted a former

London spread-betting operator as saying: "This is nothing to do with gambling in this country, this is hig Far East stuff. "I was told there was no way

Arsenal would be allowed to win on the night. I was told it might be another West Ham," West Ham had pulled back from

2-0 down to draw level with Crystal Palace in November when the floodlights failed. The operator was quoted as saying: "The bookmakers did not want a West Ham win. As soon as West Ham leveled at 2-2 the lights went out." He said syndicates target oneoff matches in midweek because betting on a single game is high.

Phil Jackson quickest to reach 500-win mark CHICAGO (AP) - Phil Jackson reached the 500-victory mark faster than any coach in NBA history as

UNSTOPPABLE - Michael Jordan drives around Darrick Martin of the LA Clippers in the Bulls' 94-89 win in Chicago on Thesday night.

Timberwolves 112, Sonics 103 In Seattle, Stephon Marbury scored 35 points, including eight 3pointers, and Minnesota hroke a record 26-game losing streak to Seattle.

Seattle's 26-game winning streak against the Timberwolves over six seasons was an NBA record by one

Marbury much of the game but couldn't stop him. Marbury made 13 of 19 shots from the field. Trail Blazers 93, Kings 82 had 19 points and 12 rebounds as Portland dominated inside for a victory over Sacramento. Brian Grant added 17 points and team against another. Gary Payton, one of the NBA's top defensive guards, was on scored 17. The Blazers outrebounded the Kings 62-40, including 19 offensive boards.

Marshall scored 20 points, incloding five during a decisive 15-0 surge, and Golden State held Denver to seven fourth-quarter points. The seven points were a fran-chise low for a quarter. The Nuggers' previous low was eight points in the second quarter against Detroit on Dec. 9.

LONDON (Reuters) · Manchester United, Blackburn and Chelsea, the English premier league's three leading clubs, could put more daylight between themselves and the rest over the Christmas weekend.

United face a home match against 19th-placed Everton tomorrow and an away game against 16th-placed Coventry on Sunday, two more matches which should not trouble the pacesetters unduly.

While the depth and quality of the league champions' resources has . enabled them to offset the absence of injured defenders David May and Denis Irwin, Everton's shortage of fnepower is likely to be less easily overcome.

They have Duncan Ferguson suspended and Gary Speed, scorer of their goal in a I-O away win over Leicester last weekend, doubtful with an ankle injury sustained in training

South Africa have since scored a series win in Pakistan, a rare occurrence.

Taylor said he felt revitalized after the enforced break. "It's had a lot of positives for me," said Taylor of his two thirds fit ,

I feel really fresh and I'm really looking forward to this game.

Taylor said the only days he did not enjoy during his three weeks out of the national spotlight were match days against South Africa and New Zealand.

"Some games I watched more than others, but I just tried to go about my own business," Taylor said. Sieve Wargh, who took over the captaincy in Taylor's absence, will return to his normal role of vice-captain. Holyfield-Lewis bout ed by the return of striker Chris

NEW YORK (AP) - Once again, an obstacle came between boxing and a unified heavyweight title. Talks between HBO and х Т

Evander Holyfield, the WBA and IBF champion, broke off Tuesday morning because of a disagreement over the amount of money Holyfield would be guaranteed to fight WBC champ Lennox Lewis:

Holyfield wanted a guarantee of 1 million pay-per-view buys, and HBO was only willing to guarantee 650,000, plus all the profits above that mark, said Lon DiBella, the senior vice president for programming at Time Warner Sports, the payper-view arm of HBO.

Hopes for unification rose Monday when Lewis' promoter said a $50 million deal was struck, and the fight was scheduled for April 25 in Las Vegas. But Holyfield and HBO, which has the exclusive rights to Lewis' fights, could not agree. "We obviously had a great difference of opinion on what the appropriate guarantee for the fight was," DiBella said. Holyfield's lawyer, Jim Thomas, wanted his client to be guaranteed at least as much money as he made for his fight against Michael Moorer. According to Nevada boxing records, Holyfield made $20 million for the November fight. The heavyweight title has not been unified since Riddick Bowe was stripped of the WBC title in 1992 for refusing to fight Lewis.

allowed in the return leg. Goemans said Forest had tried for three months to reach a financial settlement.

"But Anderlecht stick to their oint of view that they cannot be hlamed for anything," he said. Anderlecht lawyer Luc Delen said the Belgian club was not prepared to negotiate a deal with Forest since it could not accept UEFA's decision "on attempted comuption or corruption."

Soar and 16 players had been issued against Anderlecht, Vanden Stock and Raymond De Dekkh, the club's official in charge of accompanying referees.
